ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY.
WITH THE PUNTS AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION.
An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

For comprehensive and practical service this work stands out prominently above all others which the Chinese have to date been compelled to edit to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, and here given in English. Each and every word is fully explained and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Chinese and English languages are given in the second, being carefully matched on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to the pages enables a person who understands English to communicate quickly with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which they are in daily contact. In this respect the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various idioms and equivalents of different words which have no general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto published.

It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages.
